Gift to Aaron Keeler Post.

Aaron Keeler Post received a handsome present last week from a great-grandson of its honored patronymic, Col. Geo. A. Keeler, proprietor of the American House, Boston. Upon receiving a sketch of his ancestor's glorious service in the Revolutionary war, furnished him by Col. Sawyer, he sent a check for $25, asking the post to accept it as a slight token of his appreciation of the Post's remembrance of his honored ancestor. The sketch was prepared by Col. Sawyer, as Post historian, for record in its memorial book, the present of ex-Gov. C. S. Page. The Post was highly pleased with the present and voted formal thanks to the donor.

A New Board of Trustees.

The members of the Montpelier Seminary Alumni association held their annual meeting last week. By an amendment of the association charter made by the last session of the legislature the number of trustees of the seminary was reduced from 40 to 16. Four of these were elected at the last session of the Vermont Methodist conference held at Waterbury, namely: Rev. J. O. Sherburne of Williams-town, Rev. W. S. Smithers of Hardwick, Rev. George O. Howe of Island Pond and Rev. F. M. Granger of Enosburgh. The following named four were elected by this session of the association: Hon. W. P. Dillingham of Waterbury, Hon. N. W. Fisk of Isle La Motte, Rev. W. R. Davenport of Barre and Hon. Olin Merrill of Enosburgh Falls. The trustees held a meeting and elected the remaining eight, namely: Hon. Redfield Proctor, A. L. Bailey of St. Johnsbury, Fletcher Proctor of Proctor, Col. E. C. Smith of St. Albans, L. Bart Cross of Montpelier, H. N. Turner of St. Johnsbury, Hon. F. P. Ball of Bellows Falls and M. P. Perley of Enosburgh Falls. The trustees also elected the following officers: Hon. W. P. Dillingham, president; Rev. W. R. Davenport, secretary; Dr. E. M. Smith, treasurer; W. P. Dillingham, W. R. Davenport, L. Bart Cross, J. O. Sherburne and M. P. Perley, executive committee; board of investment, Olin Merrill, F. D. Proctor, L. Bart Cross, N. W. Fisk and A. L. Bailey. This board of trustees is undoubtedly the strongest board in the state, representing over $5,000,000.

Fatal Runaway.

Last week at Barnet Center there was a fatal runaway accident. Miss Nellie Gibson was driving from Milo McLaren's down a hill, when the hip strap broke, letting the breeching down. Miss Gibson sprang from the carriage, with the idea of catching the horse by the head and preventing a runaway, but in jumping she sprained both ankles and fell helpless to the ground. Her companions were Mrs. Agnes Curtis, aged over 60, and Mrs. Holmes, aged about 75. With these two left in the carriage, the horse ran on down to the foot of the hill, where both ladies were thrown out. Mrs. Holmes was thrown clear over the fence onto a mass of brush, and had an arm broken both below and above the elbow, a shoulder put out of joint and a leg broken. Mrs. Curtis was thrown on to the side of the road where brush had recently been cut, and received an ugly wound on the side of the nose and about her eye in striking on the stubble, besides having one leg broken. Mrs. Holmes has since died of her injuries.

Senator Proctor Interviewed.

Senator Proctor, in a recent interview said: "So far as our state is concerned, we are not talking about presidential choice. It is too far ahead for that. We will be satisfied with any good Republican at the head of the national ticket, and all Republicans are good."

We are not discussing silver. Our people, of course, are for sound money; the sounder the better. We are not in favor of using silver as we have always used it, but of course do not approve of the free coinage at 16 to 1 theory."

Their Centennial Celebration.

The 100th annual convention of the Cong'l churches and ministers of Vermont began in the old First church at Center Bennington, Tuesday afternoon, with a good attendance of leading men in the denomination from all parts of the state. Hon. P. K. Gleed of Morrisville presided.

The committees on the Fairbanks' boards of education and ministers' relief funds, on Sunday schools and Y. P. S. C. E. made reports and there were short remarks from delegates to and from other ecclesiastical bodies. The convention sermon, a historical one, was delivered in the evening by Rev. A. W. Wild of Elizabethtown, N. Y. It was followed by the sacrament of the Lord's supper.

In connection with the convention the annual meeting of the Vermont Woman's Home Missionary union was held in the Second Cong'l church, beginning at 9:30 a. m. There was a large attendance of women from various parts of the state. The report of the secretary was full of interest and gave a good account of the work. The treasurer reported $5,892.77 received during the year and all disbursed. There were interesting addresses from several missionaries who were present.

Wednesday forenoon, the sessions were held in the 2d church and were of more than usual interest. Principal Comstock of Chelsea read his report, which showed that the year had been a prosperous one with churches. Secretary Merrill of the Vermont Domestic Missionary society also reported gratifying progress in mission work during the year. Stirring addresses were made by Rev. J. P. Harper of Westport and several others.

At the First church Wednesday afternoon, papers were read by Rev. Henry Fairbanks of St. Johnsbury, Rev. Dr. E. H. Byington of Boston, Rev. G. P. Byington of Hardwick and Dr. W. S. Smart of Brandon.

The following officers for the general convention were elected: President, Rev. Dr. E. T. Fairbanks, St. Johnsbury; vice president, N. G. Williams, Bellows Falls; secretary, Rev. S. L. Bates; corresponding secretary, John M. Comstock, Chelsea; treasurer, David M. Camp, Newport.

The next meeting will be held in Bradford the second Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in June, 1896.

The preacher selected was Rev. V. M. Hardy, Randolph; substitute, Rev. E. A. George, Newport. Resolutions were passed endorsing the so-called New Jersey platform, for church union, also in favor of the movement for better Sunday observance.

Johnson Normal School.

June 23d, the commencement exercises of the Johnson Normal school will begin and will last until Thursday.

With the close of this term of school Dr. A. H. Campbell severs his connection with the school, after 11 years of faithful service during which time there have been over 300 graduates from this school.

Dr. R. A. Waterbury, who has for a long time been a member of the faculty of a Normal school at Geneseo, N. Y., the largest in the Empire State, has been engaged to succeed Dr. Campbell as principal at Johnson. It is expected that he will be present at Johnson on commencement week in order to meet the board of trustees.

Wm. Cheney, a young unmarried granite polisher, committed suicide Friday night, in the barn of Justus Ketchum, three miles from Barre. No cause is known.

Miss Etta Hopkins, a 17-year-old Bellows Falls girl, attempted suicide last Tuesday by swallowing a dose of mercury. She escaped without serious injury. The action is supposed to be the result of a quarrel between herself and mother regarding a young man who has been very attentive to Miss Hopkins against her mother's will.

Services in Honor of Mrs. Sally Felch at Royalton.

In the Congregational church Sunday afternoon, June 15th, service was held in memory of Mrs. Sally Felch, in which was read a portion of the program arranged for the celebration of her one hundredth birthday, which occurred June 2d, had not death called her away five days previously.

Rev. H. M. Goddard spoke fittingly of the power of the Christian life as shown in that of Mrs. Felch. Favorite hymns of the deceased were sung by the choir, and the following sketch of the life of Mrs. Felch, which had been prepared for the birthday by Mrs. Gertrude J. Laird was given by her with reverent expression and feeling for the dead:

When we consider all the wonderful events which have transpired during the last century, how much of history has been made within this time; that it covers almost the whole period of our country's independent existence and the marvelous development of its unlimited resources which have made it one of the great powers of the earth; that during this time steam and electricity have been harnessed to do man's bidding, and a thousand wonderful inventions thought out. I say, when we think of all this, a life which covers one hundred years and has witnessed these extraordinary events becomes a remarkable thing and full of interest.

The first president of the United States was about half through his second term of office when, in Enfield, N. H., June 2, 1795, Sally Gould came to brighten the home of Joseph and Sarah Gould, which sometime before had been made desolate by the death of four little ones within two weeks.

We know something of her early home training from the story which she used to tell of her father taking her on his knee and teaching her the hymn; beginning "Jesus, my all to Heaven has gone." This hymn she repeated to the writer the day before her death, and spoke of the great advantage of teaching little children good things.

When about six years old she began to go to school, not in a schoolhouse, you understand, but in a private house in a room where was standing a large loom.

It is said that human nature is the same in all ages, and a story told by Mrs. Felch of the beginning of her school life proves that children in 1800 had many of the characteristics of fin de siecle children. One of the big boys in that school said he was going to smash that loom. Such a dreadful warrent horrified the other pupils, but they did not dare to tell tales about this big boy. Finally they induced the little Sally, who was too young to understand their scheming, to tell the teacher, and the dark deed was prevented. We have proof that the faithful service for others which characterized her whole life was begun in her girlhood; for when she left the employ of Maj. Cheney of Newport, N. H., he said if he could not get her, he would get her cousin to go to him; while Mrs. Cheney said if Sally would stay with her five years she would give her at the end of that time the best feather bed in the house (a gift more highly prized then than now) and one of the clerks in her husband's store.

She was also employed by Dr. James Corbin of Newport, the grandfather of Austin Corbin whose name is associated with railroads and Croyden Park. The wages for which she worked several years were seventy-five cents a week, and she managed to save a part of this small sum. At the time of her death she had a piece of a pink print dress bought in 1812, which cost one dollar a yard.

At Dr. Corbin's she met David Stockwell, and in the year 1817, the year when James Monroe became president and the Erie canal was begun, she became his wife. Seventy-eight years ago the 30th of May (but you know May 30th was not Decoration Day till fifty years later) she attended church in the forenoon, and in the afternoon, dressed in white, she rode on a horse behind Mr. Stockwell, for wagons were then unknown, to the minister in Grantham, N. H., and was married. Mr. Stockwell was a young man, and had six boys by a former wife, five of whom lived at home. To him and his second wife were born five children. Mrs. Stockwell cared for this large family of children and step-children, doing the work connected with a farm besides making all their clothing from the raw wool and flax.

In those days the head of a family went to a tanner once a year and bought a skin of deer, which he engaged a shoemaker to come to the house and make shoes for every member of the family, and even the shoe thread had to be made by the wife. Mrs. Stockwell spun and wove cloth to clothe the entire family, and also had to spin the thread used in making up the garments, bleaching the white thread and coloring the darker shades. In addition to this, stockings had to be knit for two grown persons and for children.

Notwithstanding this immense amount of work she found time to bring up her children in "the nurture and admonition of the Lord," and had the great satisfaction of seeing them all Christians.

The entire family was musical. Her father was a singer of some note, and she herself sang the old hymns until within a few weeks of her death. This musical talent has been inherited by grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

After Mrs. Stockwell's children entered homes of their own her loving ministrations did not cease and she had the sad comfort of caring for them all in their last illness, her youngest child having died thirty-eight years ago.

Mr. Stockwell owned a valuable farm, but lost it through signing a note for a friend who failed to make his payment. The grief and worry which this occasioned hastened his death, and at the age of fifty-one his wife was left a widow with almost no property.

About two years later she married Thomas Felch of Henniker, N. H., who was also a widower and had eight children. They moved to the part of Royalton known as Onondaga and lived there till Mr. Felch's death, which occurred in 1859. After this Mrs. Felch came to Royalton Center and lived here, with the exception of a short time spent with a grand-daughter in Massachusetts, till her death.

When she no longer had a family to care for her fingers were not idle, though they had already performed what might have been called their share of the world's work.

Scores of men could testify to the thorough way she made coats, vests and trousers before sewing machines were invented. In many homes in this vicinity she had clothed the bodies of dear ones for their last resting place. The busy hands found some good work for their employment until a comparatively short time before they were folded forever to rest.

When in 1889, the centennial anniversary of the inauguration of the first president, a Washington elm was set out in front of the Cascadene it seemed fitting that the only person in this vicinity who was contemporary with Washington should take part in the exercise, and Mrs. Felch, then ninety-four years old, made a neat little speech full of patriotic sentiment.

In her early years she gave herself to the Master and during a long life was a close follower of Him "who came not to be ministered unto but to minister." Her interest in missions was very deep and not until the books are opened will it be known how much her prayers and offerings have done toward winning the world for Christ.

The influence of the training which she gave her children is being perpetuated in the lives of grandchildren, who are occupying positions of responsibility and honor in different parts of the country.

The promise made centuries ago has been fulfilled to Mrs. Felch: "Because he hath set his love upon me therefore will I deliver him. He shall call upon me and I will answer him; I will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him and honor him. With long life will I satisfy him and show him my salvation." Indeed, I am sure she would have said, "There hath not failed one word of his good promise."

Loving friends were preparing a fitting celebration of her one hundredth birthday, to which she had so long looked forward with pleasant anticipations, when five days before she had completed a full century of life, the Master called, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord;" and gently and peacefully she was carried home to celebrate her birthday with "the great host whom no man can number before the throne of God."

In Mrs. Felch's younger days Revolutionary topics still engrossed the thought of the people; she rejoiced in the American victory of 1814, watched with interest the war with Mexico, and hailed with delight the triumph of liberty and justice in 1865. No person had a truer love for country than did she, and it seemed peculiarly fitting that Memorial day should have been the day of her burial. Just seventy-eight years from the day she stood by David Stockwell's side a bride she was laid to rest by him, there to await the resurrection.

There was not a life great in the way of public achievement or renown; but it was one in which "The daily round, the common task Furnished all she sought or asked; Room to deny herself, a road To lead her daily nearer God."

Graduating Exercises of the Rochester High School.

The second annual graduation exercises of the Rochester High school were held in the G. A. R. hall Friday evening, June 7, before a large and appreciative audience. The stage was very tastefully decorated with ferns and flowers, the arch above the stage bearing the inscription, "1895." On a table in front was a beautiful display of flowers, given by friends of the graduates.

The exercises were opened by prayer by Rev. W. H. Wight, followed by a march, ably rendered by Mrs. H. H. Cushman.

The graduating class, preceded by the faculty and alumni, marched in and took its place upon the stage, together with the flower girl, Miss Lucy McLane, who performed her duties with pleasing grace and dignity.

A male quartet, composed of Messrs. Bailey, Marston, Bates and Woodward of Randolph, added much to the pleasure of the occasion by the pleasing selections given by them during the evening. The salutatorian, Almon E. Goodno, greeted the audience with a few well-chosen words. His oration, "Vermont, Her Past, Present and Future," was a well-written production and was delivered in a forcible manner, which showed that the author was in hearty sympathy with his subjects.

"Ships That Pass in the Night" was the title of an essay in verse by Blanche E. Dunham. The poetic features of this excellent paper made it one of the most interesting of the evening and a credit to the poetic talent of the writer.

In the oration, entitled "The Career of James G. Blaine," Charles F. Newton impressed upon his hearers the fact that he had made the life of this great American statesman a subject of careful study. Ella F. Mosher entertained the audience in her usual pleasing style with an exceedingly well prepared paper, entitled "The Influence of Books," which was attentively listened to.

No paper of the evening, perhaps, appealed more strongly to the sympathies of the audience than did that of Gertrude M. Swinney, who took for her subject, "New England Homes." Her earnest delivery aided much in making it effective.

"Wonders in Scientific Study" was the title of a very interesting essay given by Ethel A. Eaton, who fully demonstrated that she had given the subject diligent research.

The valedictorian, Nellie M. Lamb, took for the theme of her difficult part the class motto, "Beyond the Alps Lies Thine Italy." Her style of composition, together with her pleasing and effective delivery, made it a fitting climax to a well-sustained programme.

Following the valedictory was an appropriate address by the principal, Prof. Bixby, and the presentation of diplomas. At the close of the benediction, an informal reception was given by the class, after which a meeting of the alumni was held for the purpose of choosing officers for the ensuing year.
